Dakota Dunes River Update 10

The Missouri River and Big Sioux Rivers continue to recede. However, snow melt in the northeastern and Central SD will begin to reach our area late next week. Early information from the National Weather service indicates an event similar to this past weekend on the Big Sioux River with the Missouri River trending a little lower. The Corps will reduce releases from 33,000 cfs to 28,000 cfs tonight at 6:00 pm. These projections are very early and will change over the coming days. We will continue to update you as things change but we will keep our current protective measures in place.
